INVESTIGATION LAUNCHED TO FIND SUSPECTS

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 6.—The District Attorney's office today was reported to be following a definite line in the effort to combat Hickman's insanity defense. It was learned that George Contreras, chief of detectives of that office, was actively at work gathering information from associates and acquaintances of Hickman both here and in Kansas City, with the purpose of showing that despite the limelight prompted his actions in the Parker case.

Reports that a youth was being questioned as a possible accomplice Hickman in the Parker case were denied by District Attorney investigators this afternoon. They said that a man had given information that two youths, one of whom he believed to be Hickman, had been seen at a telephone booth in a downtown building the day after the kidnapping, at a time when Hickman is said to have tried to telephone the girl's father and encountered a busy line. The informant was taken to see Hickman and said he had been mistaken in his identification, officers stated.

Contreras and his men are said to be questioning all persons known to have been acquainted with Hickman here, and to have made arrangements for similar action at Kansas City, where Hickman formerly lived.

Hickman, according to unofficial information in this connection, is said to have manifested a strong desire for personal notice while he attended the Central High School, in Kansas City, striving especially to get his name in the school paper and eventually becoming its editor.

The defense attorneys today denied they had accused the district attorney's office of withholding an asserted six-page confession by Hickman, purporting to give the motive for the kidnapping, murder and mutilation of the Parker girl. They said they understood that such a document existed, but they had exerted no special effort to obtain it. It was estimated that "Caton" might make such an effort while Walsh is in Kansas City.

BIDS OPEN FOR CONSTRUCTION OF NEW $50,000 RICHMOND BANK

W. P. Gains Foothold On R. R. Business In C. C. County

PITTSBURG, Jan. 6.—Granted a franchise by the city council, the Western Pacific today won its month long fight to build an extension of the Sacramento Short Line into the Pittsburg industrial zone and thus gained a foothold on the rail road business in Contra Costa County.

The Pittsburg advent of the railroad, reported to be considering rebalancing of the Short Line trackage and operation of its steam trains over the electric route to give a direct and quick service from Sacramento to the bay area, is considered as the first step by the company in an extension move that may include other Contra Costa communities.

EXTENSION FOUGHT

The extension into the city's industrial area was fought by the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe Railroads and property owners on Eighth street, which the extension will traverse.

The Pittsburg Chamber of Commerce endorsed the chamber plan but did not recommend a route. Executives of Pittsburg industries also urged approval of the plan.

Only one councilman, Arnold Linchard, voted against the extension when it was called for final action this morning. The franchise was given on the votes of Councilmen Joseph McAvoy, S. V. Cardinalli, H. C. Chapin and Dave Frankel.

The railroad has agreed to pave the Eighth street right of way nine feet on each side of its tracks. Representatives have also been made that a modern passenger depot will be erected.

TO START WORK

It was announced after the franchise grant that construction will be started within a few weeks.

At a conference that preceded the council's franchise vote, executives of the Santa Fe Railroad rejected a proposal whereby the Western Pacific would be accorded the use of its trackage. This plan was suggested by council members in the hope that construction of the Eighth Street line could be avoided. The Western Pacific agreed to electrify the Santa Fe line for the mile that would be necessary to give its trains access to the industrial zone but Santa Fe officials characterized the proposal as "impractical" and "absurd."

FORSEE EXTENSION

Eighth street property owners, represented by Attorney Hugh Donovan, presented a final protest this morning against the franchise grant. Donovan declared that construction of the line would depreciate property values and said that a loss of $2,000 per building would accrue to owners. The electric line extension will cross Cumberland, Los Mendocinos and East streets to reach the industrial area.

Although Western Pacific officials have indicated no intention of such a move it is predicted that the line will, probably within a few years, be extended to Antioch.

TRAFFIC OVER STRAITS BRIDGE HAS DOUBLED

Traffic across the Carquinez straits has doubled since the opening of the huge span over the channel on May 21 of last year. The increase in traffic was announced by the American Toll Bridge officials accompanied by itemized statistics showing comparative figures of travel over the bridge during the last seven months of 1927 with the similar period of 1926 when ferries handled the traffic.

The statement also reveals that on peak days the traffic over the bridge was three times as great as it was the year previous. The largest day's travel across the bridge was on Decoration Day, when 13,531 vehicles were listed. Comparative figures for 1926 and 1927 showing the details of the increased traffic are:

Vehicle Traffic by Months
Peak Day Traffic for Similar Days
	1926	1927
June	55,855	100,820
July	68,865	133,085
August	66,193	105,906
September	67,485	104,738
October	52,724	84,389
November	47,443	74,405
December	47,485	74,000

The state highway committee of the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce is using the above figures to assist in plans for a super highway between Sacramento and Oakland. As all traffic between the East Bay cities and the state capital uses the Carquinez Bridge, these figures are regarded by officials as being an authentic estimate of traffic conditions between the cities.

CONTRACTS TO BE AWARDED IN NEXT 10 DAYS

Bids for the construction of the new Richmond Commercial and Savings Bank building, to be erected at the northeast corner of Twelfth street and Macdonald avenue, were opened in San Francisco Thursday afternoon, in the office of the Architect, Henry A. Minion.

Contracts will be awarded next week, as the bids are now under advisement. Bank officials who are examining carefully each of the low bids offered.

AWARD CONTRACTS

The building, which will house Richmond's newest bank, will be one of the most modern of the small banking institutions in the Eastbay district and will, approximately $50,000. One story in height, it will have a frontage of 50 feet on Macdonald avenue and 126 feet on Twelfth street.

The architect has chosen a dignified type of Italian renaissance and his design affords plenty of light space for the main banking room and the mezzanine to the rear of the building.

Concrete pilasters with pre-cast concrete capitals, add to the strength and dignity of the building, while a tile roof and polished chrome grill work on the windows and entrance, offers color contrast to the coldness of the concrete.

Work will be started immediately on the structure and it is expected to be ready for occupancy by early summer.

COLLEGE CLUBS

A brief news story in a college paper told of the meeting of the Mathematics Club, at which talks were given on such subjects as "Mathematical Inaccuracies in Literature" and "How to Make a Sun Dial". And the club members, the "math" students and teachers, had a good time.

If the outsider investigated he would find out that there are similar clubs for other departments of study. There are French, German, Spanish and Italian clubs that do all their conversing in the foreign language in which they are specially interested. There are classical clubs that give old Greek or Latin plays which are credited with being artistic and beautiful as well as interesting and instructive.

It wouldn't surprise us to learn that there are political science and history clubs where discussion is freer and more animated perhaps than in the lecture room.

The popular theory that students take only enough interest in their studies to pass courses thus turns out to be a fallacy. There is enthusiasm for intellectual things as well as for football within college confines.

WEATHER NEWS FOR FLYERS

It is planned to increase the safety of air mail fliers by giving them far better weather reports than they have had in the past. The new system will first be tried out on the route between Cleveland and Chicago. If successful it will be extended as needed.

At present weather reports are received at landing fields only twice a day and from only a few weather stations. Soon the number of stations reporting will be greatly increased and the reports will be sent in every two hours.

Thus a flier leaving any airport, can know what kinds of weather are prevailing along the route ahead of him and prepare for emergencies.

This is a normal step in the advancement of aviation. Radio and telegraph make such a service possible as older methods of communication could not have done.

Vigorous Health

THE USE OF WATER IN DISEASE

I was reading an article recently which referred to water as a great cosmic force, and so it is. In common with air and sunlight, it is a necessary food of man and also contributes to his well-being in many different ways. Its value is not limited to internal use, but extends to a great variety of external applications. Water inside and out has been used for many generations in the treatment of disease. It can be used to regulate circulation and functional activity with much greater certainty than by the use of drugs and there will not be the same bad after effects.

Owing to this powerful and certain action of the water, it must be used with discretion. A certain amount of stimulation or inhibition helps, but too much will be harmful the same as a certain amount of food is of value, but too much is very bad. When applied externally, water produces its effects in accordance with its temperature, mode of application and duration of treatment. There are many modes of application, such as compresses, packs, sponges, immersions, douches, steam baths, etc.

The study of hydrotherapy is a big one, but little can be given in a short article of this kind. I may say briefly, however, that warm water is soothing, a long application of hot water is depressing, cool water is moderately stimulating, a short application of cold water is very stimulating, while a long application is inhibitory. The reaction to cold is heat and to heat, cold. This is why a cold bath, when properly taken, is followed by a feeling of warmth and why many people think they must be careful to avoid "chilling" after a hot bath. A hot bath should always be followed by a cold one. In diseased conditions, the best application will be governed by the symptoms manifested. The idea being to restore as nearly as possible the normal temperature and functional activity of the part.

On account of having diabetes, I have been forbidden to eat starches and sweets. This does not leave many articles to pick from, and I would like to know if I can take meat twice per day? SUFFERER.

An excess of meat is just as much a cause of diabetes as an excess of starches and sugars. In most cases it is better not to eat meat at all, and there is no necessity for completely eliminating natural starches and sweets. When solid foods are used in a case of diabetes the chief items are the acid fruits and green vegetables with moderate amounts of light starchy vegetables, nuts, cottage cheese and eggs and small amounts of sweet fruit, honey and whole wheat toast. The exact amounts that can be used will depend upon the individual tolerance.

I have the usual symptoms of the menopause, such as hot flashes, headaches, nervousness, etc. I am also constipated. What can I do to relieve these symptoms?

These symptoms may usually accompany the menopause, but they are by no means a natural part of it. The reason you have these symptoms is because of the constipation and its causes, and not merely as a result of the menopause. The usual treatment by natural methods would be an orange diet for up to five days with daily enema, followed by a largely raw fruit and vegetable diet, together with exercises in a reclining position, deep breathing, walking, relaxation and plenty of sleep. Alternate hot and cold sitz baths are also helpful.

EUREKA-California Highway Commission will probably erect permanent home for its offices here.

The question of long engagements has been one that has been discussed from every angle, but the old story of a man "keeping company" with one girl for a number of years and then marrying another that has known but a few months is one that seems to be just one of the arguments against them.

A man will always have the privilege of changing his mind, of course, just as a woman has, but it does seem to me that in the case of a broken engagement it is the man who has the advantage of going out and seeking solace from another woman and the girl must wait to be sought after by another man.

Long engagements are very necessary from a strictly economical viewpoint sometimes and the engagement period is often one of wonderful anticipation. But when a man and a girl are looking forward to being married and the man meets another woman and falls in love with her and marries her without the courtesy of talking things over with the first love, it is hard, to say the least.

A girl's pride does a lot for her in such a case and if she is sensible she will try to figure out that it is "just as well" but the girl so often feels that if the engagement hadn't been quite so long and that if she and the man had been living under the normal conditions of marriage he would never have deserted her.

Dear Patricia Lee— I have been going with a man for six years and we were to have been married. He broke the engagement and married a woman who has three children and he only knew her a few weeks when he married her. He used to think the world of me and when he was with me was always good to me. We had been keeping company for six years and I am heartbroken over it all. I don't see how he can expect to have a happy married life after the way he has treated me.—VIVIAN.

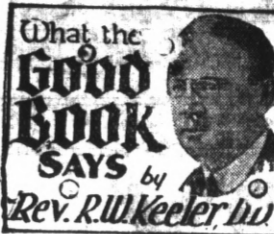

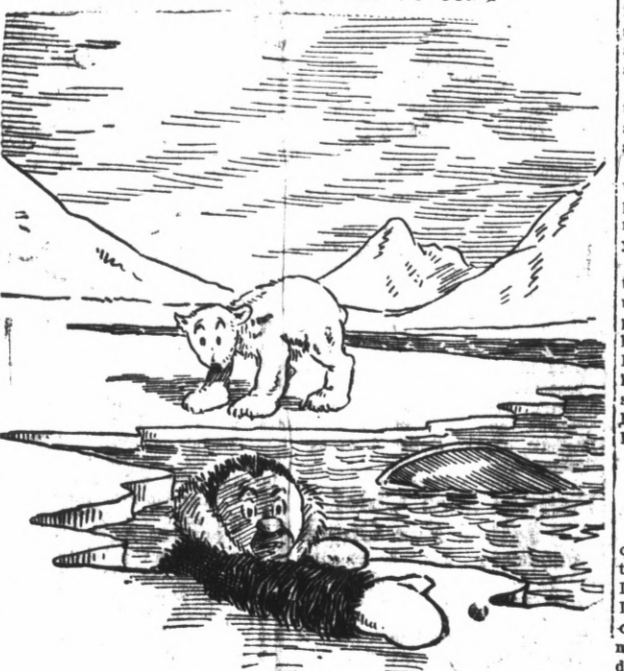

Don't make your life miserable thinking about the man and what he deserves in his married life. You simply can't change it, you know, no matter what you do and the best thing for you to do is to forget him and start over again. Try to make new friends and pick up some of the old ones that you do doubt have neglected a little during the time that you have been giving so much time to your friend.

My Dear Miss Lee: I am a man 35 years old and have lived in this city for fifteen years. I suppose you will wonder about it when I tell you that I have very few friends in the city. I have been on the road a great deal and my men friends have gradually gotten married and dropped out of town. The girls that I know and could go around with are so fond of drinking and wild parties that I don't care about going with them every night in the week and thought I think that what I really want to find is a good girl who would love me and want to have a home and children. How can I meet such a girl? BILL.

Well, all I can hope for you is that you will find the girl. There are lots of girls, you know who don't care a bit about drinking and wild parties and I am sure that if you are out to find such girls you can do it. How about the girls who are employed where you are, for instance? Have you any church or social connections? There always seems to me to be more girls than men about, and I think the trouble with you is that you have recently decided that married life is after all the only happy existence and are a bit sorry that you didn't get married long ago. Wish you luck anyway.

What Your Body Tells

THE MAN MEN FORGET HAS A FEEBLE WALK

You Are as Old as Your Walk

When one carries himself naturally in the right posture, with his head up, chin in, shoulders squared, spine straight, chest out and abdomen in, it is a sign of a youthful body and mind.

When one crawls along with the posture and gait of a feeble, aged invalid, it is a sign of old age.

Some men walk like this at 40, while others, like Chauncey Depew, live to be 90 or more and retain the posture and step of youth.

This individual will very likely tell you he is suffering with rheumatism or lumbago, but he probably has a little laziness in his mental makeup also. Were I to give three prescriptions for keeping the spine young, I would say—EXERCISE, EXERCISE and EXERCISE. A spine that is EXERCISE.

WHY I BLUSHED

One evening my mother had company for supper. I was asked to get a chair in the next room, I, not paying attention to what I was doing, took back a broken chair by mistake and told my mother's friend to sit down. She did, but on the floor. She took it as an insult and left.

BEWARE OF MARRIED MEN BY ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures Inc. "BEWARE OF MARRIED MEN" starring Irene Rich, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Myra Martin, secretary to Leonard Gilbert, a divorce lawyer, to whom she is engaged, is guardian to her younger sister, Helene. Helene becomes infatuated with Huntley Sheldon, a notorious rouser, whose wife is divorcing him. Sheldon asks Helene to his hunting lodge, but Myra, discovering the invitation, looks Helene in her room and goes to the lodge, disguised, representing herself as a member of the Young Girls' Welfare League. Sheldon recognizes Myra and pretends to have a heart attack. Myra, believing Sheldon is dying, is afraid to leave, and finally is forced to spend the night there. She falls asleep in a chair.

CHAPTER VIII

The shifting rays of the early morning sun streamed brightly through the long windows of Seven Oaks. They rested directly upon a sleeping figure in a big chair—a figure with an arm hanging limply over to one side, the head with rumpled, loosened hair, falling against the high back of the seat. The sleeper stirred fitfully, half turning against the brilliant light, and then sat up.

Myra Martin rubbed her eyes vigorously and looked about her. Yes, she was still in the lodge, all right—no doubt about that. She turned towards the lounge where Sheldon had been so ill the night before. It was rumpled, and—

"Oh yes, I recognized you last night." Myra frowned in bewilderment. Then she jumped to her feet. Where had Sheldon gone? Suppose he had wandered away in the night, delirious, ill. The thought left her cold for a moment. There was certainly no one in the room. She hurried towards the door. It was open. She tried to smooth out her hair, and straighten her crumpled suit. She went back and "licked up" her glasses and her hat and put them on. If she should encounter anyone and explain the events of the night before, she still wanted her disguise. And the hat helped hide the hair that she had not combed. She went to the door again, looking anxious about her. Then a splash as of someone diving into water brought her attention to the swimming pool in front of the house. There, just pulling himself out of the water, and looking very healthy for an invalid, was Sheldon. Myra's stare of amazement was brought to an abrupt halt by the sound of someone moving in the room behind her. She wheeled about. She saw a Japanese servant bearing a huge tray of food, which he was depositing on the library table. Carefully he was removing the covers, bringing into view breakfast for two. The man looked up and smiled.

"You sleep well, miss?" it enquired, a cheerful grin overspreading his features. The man's attitude brought to Myra the full sense of what was happening. She could have slapped him, so insolent, so obsequious he seemed. However, she remembered that he had probably seen so much of this sort of thing that it didn't matter to him. She turned on her heel without speaking and strode through the door. As she stepped on the porch, another voice greeted her.

"Good morning!" Sheldon, dripping, his wet hair clinging close to his head, smiled broadly. "How dare you!" Myra stamped her foot. "You—you—she couldn't think of words, at that moment, and the strain of the past night was telling on her. She was positively close to tears and she was determined to control them.

"Well, why not?" Sheldon was laughing, now. "You tried to put something over on me, Miss Martin. He emphasized her name punningly. Myra turned sharply. So, he knew her, after all. What a stilly

There was only one thing left to do, now—and that was to get out of the place as quickly as possible. After all, no one had seen her but the jap, and she had had her disguise—she laughed at it now, but at least it would keep a casual stranger from recognizing her. That left only Sheldon, who actually knew that she had been there. And he would probably talk only if she ever crossed his path. And she had then and there decided to steer clear of this man, for the rest of her life. And she would see that Helene did the same.

She looked around for her car. There it was, just where she had left it the night before, near the portico. Without glancing at Sheldon she started towards the machine. Then footsteps sounded along the gravel. She was face to face with a woman whom she recognized vaguely as Huntley Sheldon's wife, and a man who had all the earmarks of a private detective. "Good lord, Nita!" Sheldon looked ed at the pair who were blocking Myra's path.

If Myra had not been certain of the woman's identity before, she knew now, for the papers had often carried Mrs. Sheldon's name, as had been her photograph. And Myra knew that she was in for it. Trouble was hovering overhead like a vulture, waiting impatiently for its prey. She shuddered, but there was no way of escape.

"Well, Huntley!" Nita Sheldon's voice cut through the air like the swish of a rapier. "I can't say that I particularly admire your taste." Her sharp, black eyes ran Myra up and down, until the girl felt that they were boring straight through her. And then they turned to stare at Sheldon with a contemptuous glare that was tinged slightly with amusement. What Myra did not know, however, was that Nita had simply appraised the girl's clothes, and caught the gleam of the glasses. She hadn't really seen a shadow of the face of the figure, for she was both too angry and too pleased at having caught her husband, as she phrased it, right where she wanted him.

"O, she's only the decoration, my dear, come out to look over some hangings," Sheldon smiled, but his words carried no conviction, nor did he intend them to.

Myra is now for the moment to stay overnight, dear. Nita's room was stilly sweet, and her presence was not lost on Myra.

A word from the publisher . . . about advertising

The products you see consistently advertised in this paper are worthy of your confidence.

It takes two things to make a consistent advertiser. One is a strong conviction that he has a product that will hold its place in public favor despite competition. The other is actual proof of that . . . the increasing popularity of his product.

If his product will not stand the test of comparison he would simply be throwing his advertising investment away. If the buying public rejects his product after it has been offered in advertising he has thrown his advertising investment away.

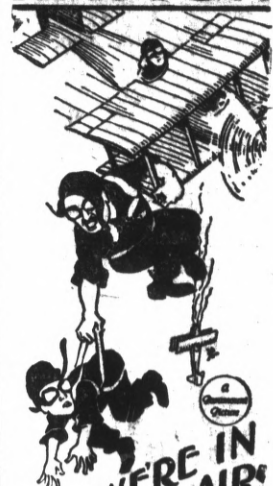

That's why the manufacturer who advertises his merchandise consistently is very sure of his quality . . . and why you may be sure of it too.

Read the advertising here in your newspaper . . . it will guide you to the buying of worthy merchandise.

Dignified Charm Sought In Dress

In the past two or three seasons there has been a distinct tendency on the part of women to return again to the winning graciousness, the dignified charm and the distinguished simplicity of truly feminine clothes.

One reflection of this "return to femininity" is the present day, fashionable women's unwillingness to appear anywhere unless properly dressed for every occasion likely to arise. Nowadays even an "over night" stay at a friend's house means that the necessary clothing must accompany one.

Nor do long visits absolve the smart women from wearing the proper clothes at all times. She will need sports clothes, afternoon clothes, evening clothes, and correct accessories for all.

For sports, ravishing little frocks, straight, simple in cut, but retaining their youthful charm.

For the afternoon there are indescribable lovely velvets, in plain or printed motifs, lustrous heavy satins, soft pliant crepes, richly subdued laces, which fall in fine plaits in wonderful draperies, in youthful flounces, panels, apron effects; flowing classic Grecian motifs, pouts and banners of the '90s.

And for the evening! Diaphanous dance frocks, pastel billows of tulle; gleaming satins and crepes on which strass and diamante glitter, picturesque period gowns which reach the ankles in sweeping grace. Lovely cloaks of lane and velvet with deep fur collars.

And the accessories. No woman today thinks of appearing in a frock which is not complemented by the exactly correct hat and shoes, the matching of suitable jewelry, fragile chiffon hose of just the right shade and texture, or if for sports, shoes which are at once sensible and a bit colorful and smart. She is not pardoned by her hosts for being incompletely equipped, merely because she is at home.

FARGE TEAM IN RITOUS FILM AT CALIFORNIA

Two Americans disguised as Scotch highlanders enlist as aviators at a French airport, and are sentenced to death as German spies.

Only Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton could appear to advantage in such a ridiculous situation. And they do so in "Now We're in the Air," the Paramount comedy which opened at the California Theatre yesterday.

Here is a comedy that has everything, good photography, good direction, capable stars, and most remarkable, a good story. The latter anomaly may be laid at the door of Monte Brice, Kennee Thompson, and Tom Geraghty. F. Strayer directed.

It is a good thing for the California Theatre that the laughs in this nonsense opera are so evenly divided. Hysteria, with possible serious consequences to the patrons, would be the result if they were not Beery and Hatton have done the impossible and topped all their previous successes. "Behind the Front," "We're in the Navy Now," and "Firemen Save My Child."

Beery and Hatton become aviators when their clothes are blown off when they get in front of a battery of airplane propellers on the testing blocks at a flying field.

They fall in love with twin sisters, one of whom has been raised a German, the other a French girl. Many of their difficulties arise over their inability to tell the truth to each other, which is not surprising when it is considered that the same Louise Brooks plays both parts capably and charmingly.

The gags are new and frequent throughout the picture and will raise Beery and Hatton to a still higher plane as laugh provokers. They have splendid support in the cast, which includes Malcolm Waite, as the German spy, Duke Martin as the top sergeant, hardboiled as usual, Emile Chataud and Russell Simpson.

"Now We're in the Air" is good for a laugh in any language. Other features include another story of "The Collegians," featuring George Lewis, "Hawaii from a Car Window," and current news events.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Ruth Snyder knows she must die in the electric chair.

Both she and Henry Judd Gray have given up that Governor Smith will grant even the meagre thirty days their attorneys begged so that alienists again might examine them.

The slayers of Albert Snyder today prepared for death. From the quivering lips of her own mother, Mrs. Snyder today heard the words that plunged her into even more dismal despair.

"She knows she must die," said Mrs. Josephine Brown, the mother. The executioner is now in Sing Sing, awaiting the signal next Thursday night.

Only a single, vague possibility arose that there might be a delay of a day, or two days, or a few days at most.

It lay in the petition of Mrs. Snyder's attorneys to Justice

To Wed Soon

ACCORDING to reports, Mrs. Dorothy Ingram (above), widow of Enrico Caruso, soon will become the bride of Alexander P. Moore, wealthy Pittsburgh publisher and widower of the world-famous beauty, Lillian Russell. Society has been looking forward to the wedding for some time, but Mr. Moore and Mrs. Ingram have been reluctant to discuss the affair.

Levy that he summon Mrs. Snyder as a material witness in her dispute with the Prudential-over payment of $35,000 on her husband's life to her ten-year-old daughter, Lorraine.

But even this, it was generally conceded, was the symptom of hopes. That matter, such hope as is held was for Mrs. Snyder, not for Gray. There is no thought for his being called as a witness in the dispute, in the event a stay is granted his best chance lies with Warden Lawes. The warden may feel it advisable that the execution of both be at the same time.

ALL HOPE GONE
Emerging from the prison after a visit to the condemned woman, Mrs. Brown, the mother, who has battled many months for her daughter's life, said tearfully, "I had to tell her all hope was gone."

"I wanted to be the one to tell her," said Mrs. Brown. "I told her it was useless to try to keep her faith any longer. I told her to prepare herself."

"She has been a brave girl. She knows now there is no hope for her. She knows that she must die."

"How did your daughter take the news?" Mrs. Brown was asked.

The woman wept as she replied, "Ruth broke down and cried."

MOTHER HOPEFUL
Mother and daughter were not compelled, as customary, to talk through cell bars. They were permitted to be together in the cell. They talked in whispers punctuated with sobs.

The other mother, Mrs. Margaret Gray, continued hopeful. In her home in East Orange she said, as she thumbs to a well-thumbed Bible, "I am still hopeful. I said not think Governor Smith said anything at the hearing to indicate our plea will be denied. I am not enough of a psychologist to guess the effect of our pleas on him, but I am sure he will review the matter thoroughly and do what he thinks best."

"Governor Smith is a just man. We will abide by his decision," she added, "we will not abandon hope until the last minute."

Mrs. Gray will visit her son tomorrow.

Before Justice Levy is the application of Edgar F. Hazelton and Dana Wallace, attorneys for Mrs. Snyder, for a jury trial, in the action in which the Prudential seeks to avoid payment of the insurance on the ground Mrs. Snyder took it out without her husband's knowledge.

FAST WESTERN HAS PREMIERE AT RICHMOND

One type of picture, typically American and immensely popular, can be made only in America, and that is the Western drama. America and all the rest of the world loves this type of screen story. The dean of Western writers is Zane Grey whose name is famous the globe round, and his latest romantic tale for the screen "Nevada" had its local premiere yesterday at the Richmond theatre.

Paramount is to be congratulated upon its monopoly of the Zane Grey stories and the manner in which these stories are filmed.

"Nevada" like its fore-runners, is faithful to the West. It has all the dash, thrill and romance of the Southwest frontier country in the days of the cattle barons, the days of the two-gun men, brave sheriffs, picturesque cowboys, villainous cattle rustlers and lovely heroines.

In directing the picture, John Waters was given a superb cast by B. P. Schulberg, associate Paramount producer; namely, Gary Cooper, handsome young Western star, Thelma Todd, a young leading woman of great promise and beauty, William Powell, character heavy known to millions of fans; Philip Strange, Ernie S. Adams, Guy Oliver, Christian J. Frank and Ivan Christy.

Gary Cooper, as the hero, starts out under somewhat of a cloud, being too hasty with a pair of sixshooters, but he puts his shooting ability to good use in a just case before the picture is over. A scene of intense excitement comes in a battle between two large armed forces, a sheriff's posse on one side and a band of desperados and cattle thieves on the other. The love story is handled differently than in most Western stories, for Cooper treats Thelma a little roughly at first, but Powell, later unmasked as a scoundrel, plays his cards with gentleness and suavity.

Other film features include the last thrilling chapter of "The Hidden Stallion" and "Ko Ko Gets Excited," a cartoon comedy.

"Blue Sunday" Advocates Try To Puritanize Nation, Charge

(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—"Blue Sunday" advocates have opened a drive to put the lid on Sabbath amusements and recreations over the whole nation. W. F. Martin, president of the Potomac conference of Seventh Day Adventists charged today.

The first move, Martin warned, is to jam through congress the district of Columbia Sunday closing bill, sponsored by Representative Lankford, (D.) of Georgia. "This religious measure prohibits all employment and all business of every kind on Sunday except works of necessity and charity," Martin said. "It also prohibits all innocent recreation, amusements, sports, entertainments, educational lectures, concerts and public assemblies of every kind where an admission fee is directly or indirectly received."

Calling it an attempt to "puritanize America," Martin pointed out some of the "inconsistencies" of the measure.

"It would be a crime to sell a raw potato, a can of corn, a loaf of bread, a gallon of kerosene, a horse collar or a cigarette," he said.

"Yet it would be legal to sell a cooked potato, corn on the cob, a sandwich, a cup of coffee, a gallon of gasoline, an auto tire, or a cigar."

Congress has consistently refused to enact Sunday observance laws and the present drive is an attempt to have Congress commit itself to religious legislation, a dangerous legal precedent, Martin declared.

His organization has called a mass meeting in protest to be held here Sunday evening.

DOCTOR FAILS TO PLEAD IN SACK MURDER

(By Universal Service)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 6.—Dr. Charles M. McMillan today entered no plea when arraigned before Superior Judge Carlos Hardy on an indictment charging the murder of Mrs. Amelia Appleby, whose body, bound in a sack, was found near San Fernando Christmas night.

His attorneys, Ray Chasebro and Jerome J. Mayo, said they had entered the case so late that they felt justified in requesting a delay in pleading until next Thursday. Judge Hardy set 2 p. m. Monday as the time for returning the plea.

INVESTIGATE CAR

Mrs. Appleby's automobile reported by the sheriff's office as having been located in a garage rented by McMillan, today continued to be the subject of investigation. The sheriff's office stated that McMillan admitted he had had a man drive the car to the garage from its parking place in front of Mrs. Appleby's home. He said he understood that Mrs. Appleby had gone to San Diego, and he did not think she would like having the car left out in the street.

Mrs. Minnie Klock, from whom McMillan rented his apartment and the garage, was questioned at length, according to sheriff's investigators. They said she had related driving to Culver City with McMillan on a business trip on or about December 22, the day when Mrs. Appleby was last seen by neighbors. She said she could not say whether or not the car was Mrs. Appleby's but it was of a similar type.

Squirrels Get Attention As Suit Impends

MARTINEZ, Jan. 6.—Is thallium sulphate an effective squirrel poison, more effective than carbon bi-sulphate or grain poisoned with strychnine?

Are the late spring and early summer months better for poisoning squirrels than the late winter?

Did Horticultural Commissioner Verne G. Stevens decline to sell the Cowell Cement Co. enough of the highly recommended thallium sulphate to make a test and insist upon the company taking enough to cover the entire 3500-acre Marsh Creek ranch?

Did W. H. George, general manager of the Cowell Co. prosecute the poisoning of squirrels on the ranch as conscientiously and vigorously as the circumstances required and did he co-operate with Stevens' department in a proper manner to obtain the best results?

Did the Cowell Co. exert as much effort to exterminate the squirrels from the Marsh Creek ranch as did other ranchers and land owners in the vicinity?

All these and many more questions are to be submitted to a jury in Judge A. B. McKenzie's court some time next Tuesday or Wednesday and by the verdict returned, the jury must give the answers, at least nine of the eleven jurors must agree on the result of the investigation.

It is claimed that for two seasons after the Cowell interests acquired the old Stone House ranch from the Balfour-Guthrie interests on Marsh Creek south of Brentwood, no attempt was made to fight the squirrel pest and that the rodents, breeding rapidly on the Cowell ranch "reserve" overrun neighboring holdings.

Then the Cowell company started work fighting the squirrels, but Stevens claims, in an ineffective manner. George insists that the late winter months, just before the mother squirrels give birth to their broods of young is the proper time to fight the rodent pest with carbon bisulphide or other death-dealing devices or poisons, and that anti-squirrel work later in the year is excessively expensive and not productive of as good results.

The Cowell company in April of last year had two men working full time and a third part time in poisoning squirrels, but Stevens insisted that this was not sufficient effort and further thallium sulphate be purchased through his office and used as the "most effective of all exterminators." When the Cowell interests did not abide by this ruling Stevens gave the required notice and then "moved onto" the property with ten men and set out poison over the entire ranch.

The cost of this work, some $1500 or more, was assessed to the Cowell Co. and when payment was refused of what the land owner terms "a terrific bill" District Attorney A. B. Tinning, at Stevens' request, sued out a lien on the property. It is the trial of this issue that is now going on before the eleven jurors in Judge McKenzie's court. Tinning and Deputy Rex L. Boyer are prosecuting the case and J. E. Rodgers and A. F. Bray are defending the Cowell company.

Slain Men Get Inning In 1928 As Fashions Change

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—"Plenty has made me poor. I could wish that what I am in love with was away," So remarked the immortal Lily and the man of fashion now echoes the refrain.

Slim men will be more popular than ever in 1928, according to the fashionable tailors and manufacturers of ready-to-wear clothing, of the better sort.

The effort to erase high stomachs is far flung and men burdened with embonpoint are tolling early and late to "reduce." The clothing designers are doing their bit to produce men who will harmonize with the tall, long legged girls now widely accepted as the approved 1928 models and before the year is much older a fat man may be a curiosity in the streets of American cities.

WAISTCOATS SNUG

Waistcoats are being cut snug at the waist and one of the modern methods of removing a conspicuous stomach consists of wearing the belt so snug that the suet is forced up around the chest, thus providing a false athletic front.

TIMES DO CHANGE

"I have been studying men for 30 years and I never saw such a 'change of front' as has been apparent in the last year," declares a designer for a Rochester firm making expensive ready-to-wear garments. "This sort of thing is far from wholesome but it is all in the current trend. Healthy men are hearty eaters, and occasionally two-flated drink-

DANCE CAREER LURES WIFE TO LEAVE HUSBAND

MARTINEZ, Jan. 6.—When a young wife steps out with her two step-brothers bound for the sunny south and a dancing career without previously consulting with her husband and only leaving him a note telling of her departure and plans, should the matter be looked into with a view to prosecuting the said step-brothers or either of them?

Thomas P. Hall, local business man so believes and he carried his idea into execution when his pretty young wife "eloped" New Year's eve with Arthur L. and R. J. Comber, step-brothers, ostensibly bound for a dancing career in Los Angeles.

Hall had overheard the two Combers, who had spent a couple of days here last week, remark that they intended to pass through Lindsey en route south and when he discovered the note left by his wife telling of her plans and intentions he forthwith hot-footed it for Tulare county where he obtained a warrant for the apprehension of the Comber brothers "for investigation." R. J. Comber was taken into custody at Lindsey by Constable Roy Purcell when the trio reached that city and was taken off to the Visalia jail to await "investigation," while Hall brought his wife home with him.

Detention of Comber II made possible through the operation of a new California law which provides that a woman, be she maid or matron, is a minor until she attains the age of 21 years. As Mrs. Hall is but 20 years of age she is not yet the mistress entirely of her own actions and future, thus making her husband's action in the matter wholly within the statutes.

At any rate the Visalia courts will be called upon to pass upon the novel case.

LOUGHRAN GETS DECISION OVER LOMSKI

CHAMP DOWNED TWICE IN THE FIRST ROUND

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Knocked down twice for counts of nine in the first round Tommy Loughran, the light heavyweight champ, gave a masterly exhibition of scientific boxing in defending his title against Leo Lomski of Aberdeen in the Garden tonight.

Tommy took 13 of the 15 rounds.

That first round was almost as sensational as the seventh round at Chicago when Gene Tunney arose from the canvas in time to save his heavyweight title from passing back to Jack Dempsey.

Leo took Thomas by surprise when the champ was still cold and not expecting the hurricane assault that burst upon him.

The round opened tamely enough. Tommy was jabbing lightly with his left and stepping around when Lomski suddenly rushed in and put a left and right to the jaw.

Down went the champ on his back. His heels flew high in the air. Tommy rolled over at the count of three and waited to nine before getting to his feet. Despite the force of the blow that floored him the champ was cool and collected as Lomski charged in with both hands flying.

He blocked two terrific swings and then grabbed and held on for a few precious seconds. Lomski tore himself free from the champ's clutching arms and swung left and right to the head and body as fast as he could drive them across. Tommy circled and as Leo charged in once more met him with two stiff lefts to the face and a crushing right to the jaw. The champ checked another charge with a well placed straight right and then rocked Leo with a right uppercut under the chin.

Tommy was outboxing and out hitting his opponent and fast putting down the lead when he ran into more trouble. As Tommy jabbed once more with his left Leo put over a right hand cross counter that landed flush on the jaw. Once more the champ went down as though shot through the heart. He got up at nine and the bell sounded before Lomski could do further damage.

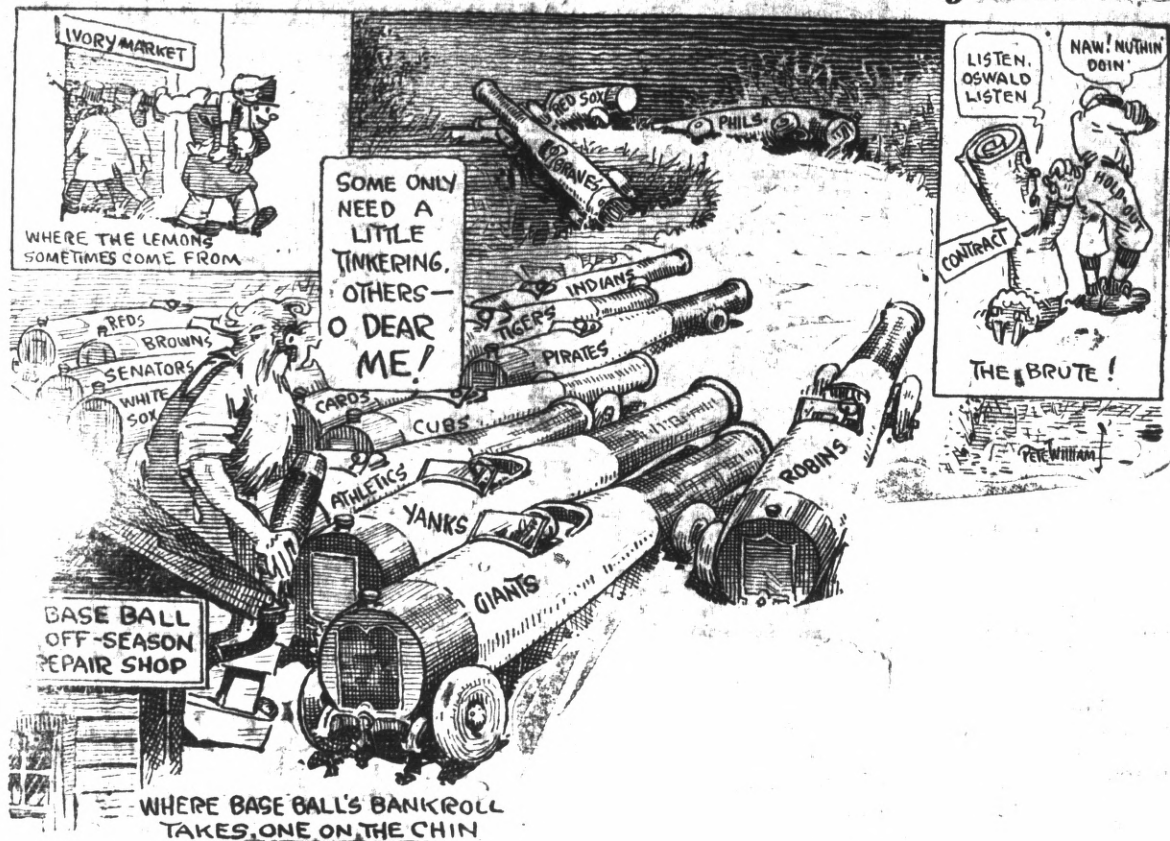

From that time on Loughran held the fight showing all the skill of a Jim Corbett. He baffled his opponent's attempt to rush him by pumping straight lefts into his face. Tom was not satisfied to try for a victory on points. He did his best to bring Lomski down with right handers that landed flush on the button, but the rugged Lomski was too tough to be dropped. He took the best, hesitating only momentarily before again charging in again.

The second round was all Loughran's. He outboxed and out hit Leo, who was so busy picking gloves out of his face that he had no chance to set for another crusher. Lomski was only dangerous when he could get to close quarters and plant his right to the head.

He soon had Loughran's left side blushing a fiery crimson. As the bout went on Tommy's science became the deciding factor, though Lomski bored in continually. Round after round went by without his landing a really damaging punch. Tommy's defense was almost perfect. His footwork baffled his hardhitting opponent and except for an occasional wallop to the body Leo seldom scored.

BEAR HUNTING POPULAR WITH STATE HUNTERS

Many California hunters have been leaving for Trinity and Humboldt counties since the opening of the black bear season in Northern California, according to George Olson, local Oakland-Pontiac dealer. E. V. Carroll and James B. Patterson, who have been hunting companions for years, have been very successful bringing in three bears on their last trip.

The black bear (Ursus Americanus) is found in all of the forested regions of the continent north of Mexico, his haunts being the most wide-spread of any of the bears in America. They still remain wherever a large patch of forest or a range of mountains or rough hills gives them harbor. From here they may raid the pasture lots and pig sties of the frontier farmers. This is true especially in the early spring when wild food is scarce. Black bears climb trees easily, travel about a great deal, and are often captured and tamed. They are timid and secretive, and are rarely dangerous, unless wounded or cornered and enraged. The color of this bear is usually black, but brown, reddish or even yellowish examples are frequently seen. The nose is always light brown or tan. In sizes they average about five feet but in many cases grow so large and heavy that it is a problem to get them out of the woods after they have been bagged.

Because of the thick underbrush and rugged contour of the ground where these bears are found it is almost always necessary to use bounds in hunting them. The dogs are very carefully trained while young and later form one of the most cherished possessions of the hunter. They follow the bear swiftly, once they get his scent, until they either tree him or get him out into the more open country, the hunters trailing them by the sound of their baying until the chance for a good shot is found.

A brain weighing 686 pounds was the prize of Carroll's last hunt, and is shown with an Oakland All-American Six sedan, which Carroll used to call for his bear.

About the nicest of all the football days I had last season was the one I spent at Princeton. Surely there isn't a lozier campus in America, nor a college that seems more enveloped in an atmosphere of calm and tranquility than the one at Princeton. The low, gabled dormitory buildings, just now in the process of being coming covered with ivy, the administration buildings and the older halls, already ivy covered, and the long sweeps of greenward, dotted with elms and maples, make Princeton distinctly different from the general run of American colleges with their tenement-house-looking buildings of bald brick and concrete sidewalks.

It is like walking through a cloister to stroll around the Princeton campus. One seems completely shut off from the turmoil that is generally associated with life in the Big City. While there are some very happy looking young men strolling about the campus with you one somehow has the feeling that he'd like to stay there for quite a while, doing nothing in particular but enjoying the academic calm of the place.

It is entirely possible that my thousands of admirers aren't even remotely interested in the nicest day I had during the past football season. It is even possible—though I hate to think of it—that they aren't interested in any sort of a day I had during any football season; but the something about Princeton that will get you in time, and at present I am lying awake nights figuring out how I can put aside enough money to retire to a leisurely life of pipe smoking and loafing at Old Nassau.

A couple of years ago, during one of the Detroit Tigers' road trips to New York, Ed Sullivan had a long evening's chattering with Ty Cobb. Signs that the Georgia Peach was preparing to wind up his major league career were inescapable, and the conversation had much to do with what Ty Cobb would do when he finally stepped out of the picture. "I think Princeton's the loveliest town in America," Cobb told Ed that night, "and when I'm all through with baseball I'm going to move my family there and settle at the college for the rest of my life. I'd like to coach baseball there and be a part of the college life. I can't think of anything that would be pleasanter, and you can bet all the ten in China that when my son is ready to go to college it's Princeton he is going to."

Cobb's son is now at Princeton, diligently perfecting his form at tennis and quite as diligently giving baseball the old go-by. He has neither his father's ability nor enthusiasms for baseball, and is delighted because he will be spared future comparison with one who was probably the greatest ball player ever developed. Champions' sons are invariably disappointing, though why they should be expected to be otherwise is something you will have to take up with Ben Ali. Ginsberg, the Hindu philosopher. However, those who remember the father always expect the same of the son, and when they don't get it, make disparaging cracks about the trend of modern civilization and the decline of the race!

It'll be surprising if Billy Evans grabs anything at all for his Cleveland Indians before the 1928 season opens, for he has worked himself up to a state where he feels he is a lamb among wolves, and regards every proposition with the deepest suspicion. During the meeting, he protested that veteran managers were trying to slip a few fast ones over on him because he was new in the trading end of baseball.

This gave every one present a good chuckle, as well as giving several American League managers the opportunity to tell Evans to go chase himself for the first time in twenty years without being ruled off the field.

"Can you imagine an UMPIRE, holloing 'ROBBER?' asked Westbrook Pegler.

Walter Winchell was a little wild-eyed with amazement last week when he learned that Moe Berg of the White Sox had been a student at the Sorbonne in Paris. He may be a little more pop-eyed to learn that Moe hopped into the big leagues from Princeton, and right now is finishing his law course at Columbia University. Moe will finish in June, but he may break an annual rule this spring by leaving school a little earlier to go South with the White Sox for spring training.

After playing a substitute infielder's role for several seasons, Berg is this year going out after a regular catcher's job. He did a fine piece of work when he stepped behind the bat last season to fill in while Ray Schalk and Hawk Crouse were both on the sick list. That Ray Schalk was impressed with his work, and is going to give him a chance to make good this coming spring, is indicated by the White Sox reserve listing, which has him down as a catcher.

WESLEY M. E. BAPTISTS IN CAGE VICTORIES

The strong Wesley Methodist cage team came out on top in a game played with the First Presbyterian quintet at the Richmond Y. M. C. A. last night. The score stood 24 to 20 as the ball went through the hoop for the last 'ah' from the audience.

The San Pablo Baptists and St. Edmund's Episcopal fought another hard game to the tune of Baptists 24, Episcopalians 21. Both games were distinguished by clean sportsmanship and every man was in it from start to finish.

Advertising Is Topic At Meet Of Kiwanians

The merchant and manufacturer who keep abreast and a little ahead of the tide by knowing the pulse of the public, and by advertising are those who are successful; this was the message of James Holbrook, advertising manager of the Paraffine corporation of Berkeley in his address before the Richmond Rotary club in the Hotel Carquinez yesterday.

He commended the small town newspaper for its great service to America in welding into united group the great mass of millions of people through the daily dissemination of news and knowledge. While he spoke of other forms of advertising, he said that advertising in the home newspaper leads in value in return. He said that the merchant, who advertises to help the paper, is fooling himself, and that the newspaper is daily doing ten times more for the merchant than the merchant is doing for the newspaper.

Edward J. Murray was chairman of the day and Lawrence Lowry of Oakland spoke on the plans of the Greater California a new promotion service for the state.

Deputy District Attorney Hiram Jacobs has been ill at his home, 1226 Roosevelt avenue, under the care of Dr. C. L. Abbott, who has ordered quiet and rest. He will probably be able to resume his practice in a few days.

Drastic Cut Made In Whippet Prices; Fine Feature In Models

John S. Willys, President of Willys-Overland, Inc., in a startling announcement made a characteristic move when he dropped the prices of the Whippet by a larger margin than has previously been made by any manufacturer in one move.

In addition to the price cut, an improved car was announced with added equipment and bodies which enhance its beauty. A new body plant which will take care of Whippet construction, and the opening of a new Forge and heat treating plant, have been important factors in increasing the operating efficiency and economy of the Willys-Overland Factory.

NEW BODY DESIGN
The new Whippet models show a body design on the enclosed cars which incorporates the latest cadet type of sun visor, contrasting window reveals which add materially to the appearance of the body, remote door controls, and entirely new pressed steel fenders, wider than previously used, and of the full crown type.

The headlights have been raised and mounted on a new one-piece cross member. The new equipment includes an automatic windshield wiper, rear vision mirror, and stop light at the rear in combination with the rear driving light.

MANY NEW FEATURES
General features which have characterized Whippet construction in the past include gasoline tank at the rear with Stewart vacuum feed to the carburetor, semi-elliptic springs, extra large four-wheel brakes, mechanical in type, full pressure feed lubrication, heavy balanced crank shaft, longer connecting rods to eliminate side thrust at high speed, and silent chain timing gear drive.

The Whippet was the first light car to offer four-wheel brakes as a standard national equipment, and the first to offer the lower and more compact form of body construction which has now been generally adopted. It was also first to introduce high efficiency motor construction in the light car field.

HOLDS HIGH RECORD
Since its introduction, the Whippet has set a long list of performance records, many of which have been made in California. An economy drive from Los Angeles to New York under official A. A. A. observation set a fuel consumption record of forty-three and 28-100 miles to the gallon. Just recently, under official observation, the Whippet climbed Mount Diablo in 24 minutes, six and 2-5 seconds, breaking a former record of two years standing. In Southern California, from two hundred and eighty-four feet below sea level in Death Valley, the Whippet climbed the steep slopes of White Mountain to the highest point ever reached by any car in America, nearly 12,000 feet. A thirty-day, thirty-night non-stop run in which twelve thousand and eight miles were covered, netted a fuel consumption of 31.1 miles to the gallon, and on which but seven quarts of oil were used. Los Angeles to San Diego, and then from Los Angeles to San Francisco, were driven in second gear, the Whippet averaging better than thirty miles an hour. These records and many others have remained unbroken by any other car in the Whippet class.

LOW BODIES
Not only low in price, but also low in height, the Whippet affords unusual road stability at all speeds and over all roads. Interior dimensions of the body are large, and, in order to furnish additional leg room for the occupants of the front seat, an ingenious piece of engineering curves the dash outward under the hood.

INTERIOR TRIM
Interior appointments are particularly pleasing with Cirassion Walnut finish on the instrument board, frosted dome light, fine ribbed velvet upholstery and nickel trimmings. The addition of the automatic windshield wiper and the use of a rear vision mirror completes the equipment which includes speedometer, oil gauge, ammeter, and dash light, together with the usual switch equipment.

HIGH EFFICIENCY MOTOR
Motor dimensions in the new Whippet remain unchanged, and the motor develops slightly over double its rated horsepower, it being the only light car power plant in this country in which such power efficiency is attained.

The features of design of the Whippet are still individual in the light car field. The action forecast by statements regarding price changes make this position even more emphatic than in the past, and it is the general opinion of automobile men who have followed the earlier developments of the week, that the new price range on this model will bring about interesting sales developments.
